EXPLORE THE ISLAND
Snorkeling and paddle-boarding are among the many activities available to guests.

Hollywood Legacy
For years Brando split time living between L.A. and Tetiaroa, where he would visit his Tahitian wife, Tarita Teriipaia.

PRIME LOCATION

Each villa sits on a white-sand beach and has an ocean view.

FINE DINING

This $525 cocktail includes ginger-infused Belvedere vodka, lemongrass and apple, and is adorned with Tahitian pearls.

ONCE HOME TO TAHITIAN ROYALTY, the private island of Tetiaroa was purchased by Marlon Brando in 1967 and served as his hideaway until his death in 2004. The Brando opened in 2014 as an eco-friendly paradise, fulfilling the actor's dream to preserve the landscape while creating a place for guests, residents and scientific research. The resort, priced at up to $13,000 per night, is accessible only by private plane and caters to the likes of Barack and Michelle Obama and Leonardo DiCaprio. "I've been to some beautiful places, but the color of the water there—you stare, you're in awe, your troubles disappear," said actress Laura Dern. Each of the 35 secluded villas comes with an outdoor bath, infinity pool and bicycles to explore the island. Cuisine from Guy Martin of the Paris Michelin-rated restaurant Le Grand Vefour is available 24 hours a day. —EMILY STROHM
